Description of Property and Justification: (Please attach map and photo)

The Gnegy Church was built in 1886 or 1887 by the Holdeman Mennonites, an Amish sect. It was named for their leader Samuel Gnegy, who is buried in the adjoining cemetery. The church was surveyed by MHT in 1981 as part of the Coal Region Survey. The one-bay by three-bay structure is constructed of vertical wood planks sheathed in white-painted weatherboards. A projecting bay at the rear accommodates the apse. A small porch shelters the entry. The building rests on a low stone foundation and is covered by an asphalt shingle roof. An exterior brick chimney serves a heating stove on the south side. Original shutters cover the 2/2 sash windows. According to an interior inspection by MHT in 1981, the walls are finished with lath and plaster. Plain boards form architraves and baseboards. A wood hymnal box is dated October 26, 1889. Regular church services were discontinued in 1950. The building is used occasionally for functions such as the Gnegy family reunion. The north side of the church is similar in appearance to the south elevation as seen in the accompanying photograph.

The architecturally intact Gnegy Church is significant under National Register Criterion C for its design, materials and workmanship, and the regionally popular vertical plank construction. The building further retains high integrity of location, feeling and setting. The church is significant under Criterion A for its association with the Holdeman Mennonites, a religious and ethnic group important to early settlement patterns in the region. The building is well-preserved in nearly original condition. In 1981

MHT rated this church as "Good", a level which could be elevated to National Register status. For these considerations it is recommended as eligible for the National Register of Historic Places.

An archaeological assessment, Criterion D, was not part of this evaluation of above-ground resources.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Gnegy Church and cemetery is located on the W side of Rt. 219, .1 mile NE of the WV State line. The church is a one story, one bay by three bay plank constructed structure. It has weatherboard siding with cornerboards and the gable roof is covered with asphalt shingles. The facade has a central entrance and faces SE towards Rt. 219. There is a plain wood porch with a tongue and groove floor at the entrance. There is a one story bay addition with two windows forming the apse of the church on the NW elevation. The church rests on a very low stone foundation; the bay is supported by wood piers concealed by horizontal wood planks. All windows are two over two sash and have wood shutters with original hinges. An exterior brick chimney is on the SW elevation.

Interior: the church is entered at the SE facade into one room with a central aisle. The apse is at the opposite end of the room from the entrance and is raised from the floor by one step. The interior is very plain; walls are lath and plaster painted lime green. There are white baseboards and plain board window surrounds. In several sections the lath and plaster have been removed exposing the plank wall construction. The plaster from the ceiling has also been removed exposing the wood beams. A wood hymnal box located on the N side of the NW wall bears the date October 26, 1889.

The cemetery is located just NE of the church at the SW corner of the intersection of Rt. 219 and Gnegy Church--Old Oak Road. It is a small cemetery and the earliest tombstone bears this inscription: Samuel Gnegy, Jr./April 24, 1865/January 9, 1894.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Gnegy Church, constructed in 1886 or 1887, was named for Samuel Gnegy, leader of the Holdeman Mennonites, a sect of the Amish Church.¹

It is typical of small rural Garrett County churches constructed by Amish and Mennonite congregations--a plain, frame, 1-story, one bay by three bay gable end facade structure. The vertical plank construction is a common form of late 19th and early 20th century building construction used in Garrett County.

Samuel Gnegy was born near Myersdale, PA in 1830. He moved to Brookside, VA (WV) in 1852 and to Maryland in 1856. He settled on the Covent Garden tract (124 acres), near the present site of the church. Sometime prior to the construction of Gnegy Church, Samuel Gnegy and others broke from the Amish Church and organized the Holdeman Mennonite sect.²

The church has also been known as the Gnegy-Slabaugh Church, because of its close association with both families. It served a Mennonite congregation until 1950. At present, it is used marginally for special occasions, such as the Gnegy family reunions.

Gnegy Church has become the place name for this section of Garrett County.

In John A. Hostetler's Amish Society, he writes in the mid-1970s that the Holdeman sect was founded over one-hundred years ago. (p. 288).
